The eight-hour bill ran into a veritable landslide yesterday.

There is no doubt that Root's message to the voters of New York will carry tremendous weight.

Whiskey in a teapot may appropriately be called a tempest in a teapot, or at least the making of a tempest.

Vermont views with equanimity the political turmoil that is now going on in 43 states of the union. We have had ours.

Count Boni's chances to keep that Goulding time is not a safe thing to wager on just now. Boni will need to begin now to save up the pennies for the rainy day that is promised.

We notice that several Rutland school-houses were broken into the other night, and much depredation was done. However, we failed to notice that the map of Vermont or Conant's "Vermont" were interfered with.

The indications are that the total number of deer killed in Vermont during the past season is much below the average for several years past. The beautiful foliage is held accountable for the small record. Bless the foliage!

Speaker Cheney of the House of Representatives is to be commended for his efforts to keep his branch of the Vermont legislature from running home at the first provocation. For two Friday afternoons he has by tactfulness kept the House in session to finish up the week's work. That done the members are ready to start in anew at the reopening on Monday afternoon.

Dr. W. N. Bryant of the State Tuberculosis commission, which recently asked for its own abolition, states in an interview with the Ludlow Tribune the reasons for such a strange request. Dr. Bryant says that the request was not made with the idea of letting go at all of the special work for which the commission was formed. He is quoted by The Tribune as follows: "Its members feel, indeed, that the work is but fairly begun—well in hand, so to speak—but they believe that the oversight of it, the responsibility for its further prosecution, can now wisely be turned over to a stable body like the State Board of Health. They feel that the oversight and responsibility thus placed, with a reasonable appropriation and authority for the employment by the board of such assistance as the situation demands, most effective work can be carried on in every town in the state. Hence the recommendation." The Times can reiterate what it said a short time ago, that if the tuberculosis work can be done acceptably by the State Board of Health, then all well and good for the latter body to take the work. From what Dr. Bryant says we are led to believe that it can be done capably without the necessity for longer life for the commission.

state institutions during the past two years is now seen in the bill introduced in the legislature by one member of the commission, Senator C. H. A. Stafford, relating to the duties of directors or trustees of the institutions. The bill goes at the root of the trouble—directing that does not direct. It attempts to eradicate that laxity of control which permits poor administration, immoral conditions, extravagance and, it may possibly be, graft. Under the proposed law, directors will be called upon to direct, and the plan is somewhat the same as the scheme which requires policemen to register at certain points and at stated intervals. The directors or trustees of state institutions must visit their charges at least once a month singly and at least once in two months as a board, the result of which shall be communicated to the governor at the first of every second month. Failure to attend two successive meetings of the trustees shall be, and ought to be, considered proper ground for dismissal, provided, of course, that there is no good and sufficient reason for the failure to attend. In this way it will be possible to determine whether the directors are allowing their subordinates to conduct the institutions as they (the subordinates) see fit, or whether they are really having some voice in the management of affairs as they are supposed to have. A law of this nature will correct the evils which have been found to infest the state prison, the house of correction, the state asylum and the industrial school in smaller measure during the past decades.

WORTHLESS CHECKS.

How to Avoid Them and Obtain Useful Ones Instead.

A cooking recipe which contains merely the ingredients to be used may be of use to an emperor's chef, but is worthless to the average housekeeper, to say nothing of the inexperienced young wife. What housekeepers want is a recipe that will tell you just how to put the ingredients together. The place to get those recipes is in the household department of the Boston Daily Globe. The best Boston paper published—The Boston Globe. Have it at your home every day.

STRAY PICKINGS OF LOCAL INTEREST

Perhaps local theatre-goers do not appreciate some of the arrangements taken for their comfort and safety when they attend performances at the opera house. But Manager Hoban is doing much to make the local house up-to-date besides furnishing the best plays possible. One of the arrangements is the presence of two uniformed firemen, armed with extinguishers, who take their places on the stage, back of the wings, at each performance. The dimly nature of scenery and the costumes make the possibility of fire something to be reckoned with. In case there should be necessity for their services, these two firemen are prepared to respond at a moment's notice. In addition, there are two uniformed policemen at each performance, prepared to preserve order and guard against unwelcome possibilities. These are only two of the arrangements which Manager Hoban is making. They will be appreciated by the patrons when understood.

A youth steered an older man and a woman into a restaurant the other day, and the party ordered oyster stews. While waiting for the serving of the stew the young man, who had perhaps seen sixteen summers and fifteen winters, regaled the other diners in the room with his remarks, which remarks were last the oyster stews were placed before the trio, and the older man, with appetite whetted by long waiting, at once proceeded to find the bottom of the bowl.

"That ain't the way for eat oysters," the boy commanded sharply, and his elder meekly deferred to the wisdom of youth and said nothing.

"Ver don't want ter crumble yer crackers into the oysters," "Tain't no like."

The old gentleman said nothing, and the other diners in the room hastily scooped out the crackers which they had crumbled in their oysters, and could not meet the eyes of the young man for shame.

Nevertheless, what would be an oyster stew if it were not for the floating islands of Boss' crackers or some other kind?

The first snowstorm of the year. What ecstasies of delight it brings to the mind of the youth who has been looking eagerly forward to the chance to use the iron-shod vehicle which has been stored in the attic all summer! To the lover of the beautiful, what wonders in the decorative art does it bring! Trees, shrubs, earth, all covered with the thin mantle of white, fitting almost as the clouds themselves. The forests present a scene of absorbing beauty. Here the slender elms are traced in the lines of the fir arabesque; there the spruces and pines stand forth in their heavier outlines of white. The mingled twigs of the shrubs make twisted interlacing of fantastic designs. The rails of the fences, white-topped, run in intersecting lines around about the forest. The ground, as yet unbroken by the footprints of animals, wild or domestic, stretches away in a scene of purity, all the hideous features of a disfigured earth being temporarily hidden beneath the thin mantle. To the one who delights in the wondrous skill of nature, the morning after the first snowstorm is a treat.

AFTER 9 YEARS' SERVICE.

Dr. F. S. Hutchinson, Health Officer of Enosburg, Resigns.

Enosburg Falls, Nov. 3.—Dr. F. S. Hutchinson, who has been health officer of the town of Enosburg and village of July 13, 1887, an account was opened in the Granite Savings Bank and Trust company with an initial deposit of $1. Jan. 2, 1888, a deposit of $20 was made. March 14, 1888, $20, July 21, 1888, $40, and March 6, 1889, $150—a total of five deposits amounting to $220. After March, 1889, no deposit was made. This book was presented for payment a few days ago and the amount paid was $420.08, the accumulated interest amounting to $200.08.

This is a good illustration of the earning power of money when deposited in a Savings Bank and Trust Company. Such an institution not only offers a safe place for the deposit of money, but it pays a rate of interest that will largely increase the principal if account is allowed to remain undisturbed a period of years. The young man who begins today to deposit a fixed proportion of his earnings in the Granite Savings Bank and Trust Company will be in a position to take advantage of opportunity when it comes to him. If you are not now a depositor in the "Granite," may we not suggest that there is no time like the present? And that money deposited on or before November 6 will draw interest at 3½ per cent from November 1.

Striving always by courteous treatment and careful attention to detail to merit the patronage of the public with a record of twenty-one years of successful business and with the largest capital and surplus for the protection of depositors of any savings bank in Barre, we feel justified in earnestly soliciting your account.
